About This Game

On a road trip for Halloween, your car breaks down on the side of the road. A strange set of circumstances follows, as a young child appears screaming for your help and then disappears into the corn fields. Now that you've been stranded here in the middle of nowhere, you must wander into the cornfields to save this child - whoever she is. You will encounter many challenges along the way that may surprise and frighten you. This game is specifically built for VR and contains realistic graphics that will immerse you in the environment. Pitchfork is both terrifying and enjoyable, with a story line that will keep you guessing.

Well that was intense. Just finished my first game, 23 minutes of action has left me drenched in sweat and with a big grin on my face. Slow to start but by wave 16 I was constantly ducking and weaving while lobbing my shield like a maniac and laughing my\u2665\u2665\u2665\u2665\u2665off. I refunded holopoint as the constant spinning made me feel sick but the enemies seem to stick to one direction when it gets intense which I think helps. If you have a vive, buy this now.. Challenging-ish. It's difficult to explain why I'm not recommending this game, because in the end it has a lot of value. But, dunno, it's too slow and didn't resonate with me. I tried many times to finish it, but it feels more like a guessing game than a real strategic.

That said, the game has something to say and if you have some spare money and like to risk, I'd give it a try. At least, it's very different from every other game of the series (Caesar, Pharaoh, Zeus...). Might be a good game someday, but for now wait till its patched :D. If you already bought Gathering Storm DON'T BUY THIS! I waste money buying a DLC which has almost exactly the same Gathering Storm's improvements!!! It's a huge rip off.

I've never been so upset.

Says I have 10.6 hours on Taz's Profile.

10.6/10. The official anti-social DLC pack. If you use these items, you never have to put any effort into your friendships, everyone just loves you no matter how much you neglect them. I need some of these for my IRL friendships tbh. One of the best rpg maker games I have played, and I have played several.. Nice quirky little game.. Irritating UI, nonsensical storyline (even for the genre) and basically just not that fun.. This is a review mainly on controller gameplay as that's why I got this game.

I was rather looking forward to playing this game with my controller as it offers full controller support however on the second tutorial level you need to duck with the down arrow.

The down button on the controller doesn't work at all (works fine in other games), only the keyboard works.

I can't find any options at all to map the keys either.

Luckily after looking through play option I found the 'chicken' char who is smaller than the others so I can play him and I am able to get under ledges without needing to duck.

But despite being able to play a little, all the other characters are unuseable rendering a huge chunk of the game unplayable for me.

The gameplay itself is pretty fun. Each room must be completed in ten seconds. Most rooms are easily completed with a few jumps but some require hitting switches to open doors and such.

The rooms are randomized each play so thats pretty fun but it seems there are so few rooms that it feels like you're constantly repeating yourself still.

The game feels like its seriously lacking content and single player gets very boring, very fast.

I honestly thought this game was in Early Access still with such few levels.

Even for the mediocre price point there still aren't enough unique or challenging levels.

With such little content and lacking controller support I can't recommend this game.
